FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Hubbell Electric Heater Company Names Samuel Wellington as Head of Technical Support Services and Lead Technical Advisor for the Tankless Water Heater Division

Stratford, CT August 15, 2009 – Hubbell announced the appointment of Samuel Wellington as Lead Technical Advisor for the company's tankless water heater division. Wellington will be in charge of technical support for the company's tankless water heater line, in addition to the company's overall technical support operation.

"Sam comes to Hubbell with extensive experience in electronic and systems control technology," explains a Hubbell representative. "He will work closely with our sales, production and engineering departments to aid in product efficiency and application-solution development, in addition to his role as heading up our customer support department".

Prior to joining Hubbell, Wellington worked extensively with computer aided electronic control systems in gas, electric and automotive applications. He also spent two years in the automotive electronics industry performing testing and developing new technology. Wellington holds a bachelor's degree in electronics and computer aided control systems from Porter and Chester.
